Investment Strategy

Designed to maximize long-term returns, this fixed income fund with a Global Macro focus stands out for its application of technology in the investment process, allowing it to exploit inefficiencies in interest rate and credit markets. Given our specialization in risk management and an opportunistic approach, we aim for adequate compensation for the credit and liquidity risks assumed. To achieve this, we actively manage a highly diversified portfolio of leading companies and governments.

Concerning the cash portfolio.

Monthly comment

Fixed income markets continued their upward trend during September, driven by a more aggressive Fed than expected. A labor market showing signs of fatigue, combined with weaker inflation readings—especially the latest figures in Europe, which are already below the central bank’s target—have benefited short-term bonds, inverting the yield curves of major developed countries. In this environment, and following the Fed’s half-point cut, the PBoC seized the opportunity by deploying a double monetary and fiscal stimulus program. Whether this will be enough to revive Chinese consumer demand remains to be seen. For now, Powell has sent a clear signal, warning that the Fed might not cut rates as much as the market anticipates, which could affect China’s ability to implement its plans. Given the trajectory of inflation readings, we have slightly increased the portfolio’s duration to 5.97 years, with a rating of A- and a yield of 5.24%.

The risk indicator assumes that you will hold the product for 3 years. The actual risk may vary considerably in the event of an early exit, so it is possible that you will get more money back. The summary risk indicator is a guide to the level of risk of this product compared to other products. It shows how likely it is that the product will lose money because of market developments or because we are unable to pay you. We have classified this product in risk class 2, on a scale of 1 to 7, where 2 corresponds to the low risk class. This assessment rates the possibility of suffering losses in future returns as low and the probability of a bad market situation influencing our ability to pay you as very unlikely.
